What a bloomin' lovely meadow

SUN-seekers, dog-walkers and residents alike have been flocking to London Fields to take a walk on the wild side in a beautiful new meadow.

Hackney's largest ever wildflower site came into full bloom at the start of the month, and proved an instant hit with the public.

> "It's great to see so many residents out enjoying our urban meadow"

The area was fenced off by the Council in spring to improve the soil, sew seeds and give the new plants a chance to become fully established.

The meadow opening was delayed until 2 September, however, by an invasion of fat hen – an edible relative of spinach – which took root over the summer stifling the flowers. Following a massive weeding operation, it was removed allowing the meadow to thrive.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "It's great to see so many residents out enjoying our urban meadow. I'm sure it's going to become a much-loved feature at London Fields."

The meadow is sown with annual and perennial flowers so it will be a permanent park feature.

It provides a rich habitat for insects, birds, and residents looking for somewhere to relax in the sunshine.

Twitter users have been actively sharing images of the meadow. Join the conversation and add your snaps with the hashtag #londonfieldsmeadow

Sporting heroes

TV presenter Gabby Logan and Paralympic gold medallist Tim Prendergast surprised over 100 young people when they joined in the Hackney Community cup sports day.

The annual event, which is organised by community group Salaam Peace, took place on Hackney Marshes on 23 August, and was filmed for BBC show 'Inspire: The Olympic Journey'.

Gabby said: "Projects such as this are great examples of giving young people an opportunity and outlet through sport."

> "The reason for organising events such as this is to give young people an opportunity to be united through sport"

It brought young people from all parts of the borough together to play a variety of sports including football, cricket, rounders and athletics.

Tim, who won Paralympic gold in the 800 metres, was on hand to give advice and support to those interested in pursuing sports further.

Sabir Bham, director of Salaam Peace, said: "The reason for organising events such as this is to give young people an opportunity to be united through sport. This event shows how we can all enjoy sport together regardless of our colour, background and postcode."

Rupert Tyson, chair of Hackney Homes Board, which supported the event, added: "Initiatives such as this showcase the benefits of sports and encourage team building amongst our residents."

News in brief

Grants now open for voluntary and community groups

VOLUNTARY and community groups have until the 27 September to apply for a grant of up to £1,000.

The Council's community chest grants scheme helps support short-term or one-off activities, which 'foster good relations by building a strong sense of community, neighbourliness and pride'.

This is the third and final round of grants for 2013/14. Nineteen organisations have already benefited from funding including: a gardening project by Apples and Pears Play Association; community baking classes by Free Cakes for Kids Hackney; and a summer holiday fun-fair by Up N Away.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, and Culture, said: "I'm delighted that despite economic difficulties we have been able to continue to offer grants to support this vital work."

Bethune Road, N16, has been renovated for housing use

Renovated homes for social renting brought back into use

NEWLY-renovated homes for social renting are being let to families on the borough's waiting list as part of a Council initiative to bring empty properties back into use.

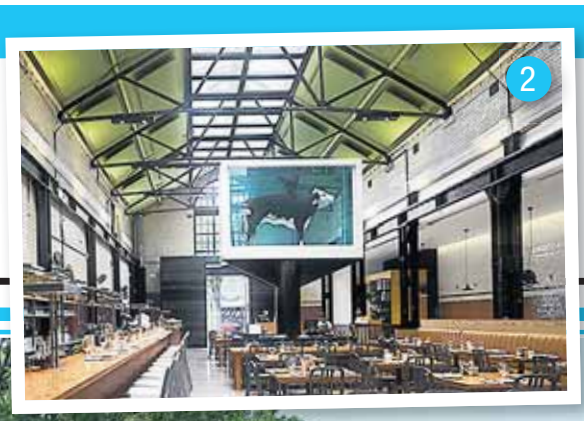

Two six-bedroom, semi-detached Council houses in Bethune Road, N16, have seen extensive structural work after subsidence led to the building being stabilised but boarded up for several years.

A family has already moved into one of the properties, after works were completed last autumn, while the finishing touches are currently being put to the other.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, said: "Hackney Council is committed to providing new homes for residents who need them most, and one of the ways we have been doing this is by renovating properties that have lain empty due to structural problems."

Over the past three years, more than 20 Council homes of various sizes have been brought back into use that were empty due to structural problems, or extensive internal or external damage.

Open up

Hackney venues are set to open their doors to the public for free during Open House London from 21 to 22 September. Clockwise from main: 1. Dalston Eastern Curve Garden; 2. Tramshed; 3. Haggerston School; 4. 71 Greenwood Road; 5. The Urswick School; 6. Mossbourne Community Academy; 7. Hackney Marshes Centre

SOME of Hackney's most interesting buildings are set to open their doors to the public for free during Open House weekend.

Open House London, which runs from 21 to 22 September, is a unique opportunity to explore and learn more about architecture and design in Hackney. More than 800 buildings of all kinds will open their doors across the capital, including 46 in Hackney, alongside a programme of neighbourhood walks, engineering and landscape tours, cycle rides and experts' talks – all for free.

This year's theme, 'celebrating architecture, people and place', explores how the built environment is evolving – including the design of homes, the role of architects, engineers and contemporary design in revitalising places, and how good design can make somewhere a better place to live in.

Victoria Thornton, founding director of Open-City, which organises the annual event, said: "Open House offers people across London the chance to explore and learn about the capital's architecture.

> "Open House offers people across London the chance to explore and learn about the capital's architecture"

"This year we're putting together a great programme of open buildings, walks, tours and talks taking in everything from award-winning contemporary homes to major regeneration areas."

Highlights for this year's Hackney Open House include recycled tube train carriages for affordable artists' studios at Village Underground; six foot narrowboats at Kingsland Basin Moorings; six-storey Suleymaniye Mosque, modelled on the Blue Mosque on Istanbul; and a walking tour of Hackney's timber buildings.

West Reservoir in Stoke Newington has a 30 acre, open stretch of safe, clean, calm water set in beautiful surroundings

Going swimmingly

WEST Reservoir in Stoke Newington has joined a prestigious list of just three venues in London to hold open water swimming events.

It will host an Aquathon on 28 September to celebrate the opening of this beautiful stretch of water to the capital's swimmers for the first time.

The event offers a range of distances for everyone to take part in, whether people are new to open water swimming, or already seasoned triathletes.

Options include 400 and 750 metre open water swims and several 'Go Tri Aquathon' races, from an 85 metre swim and 1.2 kilometre run, up to a 1,500 metre swim with a 4.8 kilometre run.

There are only two other open water swimming venues in London: The Serpentine in Hyde Park and Ham Lake in Richmond.

> "I would recommend getting down to Stoke Newington West Reservoir Centre and giving open water swimming a go"

West Reservoir in Stoke Newington provides a beautiful backdrop

The reservoir is owned by the Council, and run on its behalf by leisure centre operator Better.

Daniel Fogg, professional swimmer and Better Sport Foundation Athlete, said: "It's great to see another open water swimming facility available so close to central London, providing more people with access to this exciting sport. If anyone is tired of lane swimming and wants a challenge, or is just looking for a new way to keep fit and active, I would highly recommend getting down to Stoke Newington West Reservoir Centre and giving open water swimming a go."

The centre has a 30 acre, open stretch of safe, clean, calm water set in beautiful surroundings. Plus amenities including accessible changing facilities, hot showers, car parking and a cafe with an outdoor terrace overlooking the reservoir.

Open water swimming sessions will take place every Thursday, from 5.30-7.30pm; Saturday and Sunday, from 7.30-9.30am, up until October.

Message from the Mayor

Helping residents to get fairer pay

LOW pay is a serious issue for many people in Hackney and the Council is taking steps to prevent residents from being forced to work for less than the national minimum wage.

The Government has recently said it will publicly name and shame rogue bosses who exploit workers and ignore rules on pay, but I'm concerned that more needs to be done to catch unscrupulous businesses.

We already carry out a range of enforcement action for people who flout food hygiene and trading standards legislation, or illegally dump waste on Hackney's high streets, and I've recently asked the Business Secretary Vince Cable for similar powers to tackle employers who do not pay at least the legal minimum wage.

Those who breach licensing or environmental health rules are more likely to ignore other legal duties and we would like to use this information to help track down low pay employers. At the moment, the Government is responsible for dealing with this issue and we'd like to see a commitment from them to work together with us to stamp out this problem.

You may have seen our current campaign around the borough, letting people know that they are entitled to at least a minimum wage of £6.31 for over 21s, and £5.03 for 18 to 20-year-olds from 1 October. If you are not receiving this you should call the Pay and Work Rights Helpline on: 0800 917 2368 to make sure you get the wages you are entitled to.

Hackney Council is already on the way to becoming the first local council in which all the staff of its contractors are paid at least the higher London Living Wage, as is already the case with our own directly employed staff, and we hope to complete this early next year.

School's out for the summer

CHILDREN and young people across Hackney have enjoyed an action packed summer, making the most of hundreds of free activities put on for them by the Council and its partners.

From climbing and disability sports to acting, spoken word performance, DJing and learning about the world of business, hundreds of youngsters got involved – many at the Council's Young Hackney centres.

Young Hackney's Youth Forums also held a 'Forum Foods' event at the Forest Road centre, which was attended by over 100 young people who tucked into tasty food prepared by members and local businesses. The aim was to celebrate the foods of other cultures and to encourage young people to get cooking.

> "We support young people to recognise and make a reality of their potential"

Forest Road also played host to a Paralympic sports taster week at the start of the holiday, which gave youngsters of all abilities the chance to try out wheelchair basketball, goalball and archery.

Meanwhile, free weekly badminton sessions for beginners were held at Young Hackney Forest Road, before around 40 young people took part in a tournament.

Homerton Grove Adventure Playground used a grant from the Hackney Youth Opportunity Fund to host gardening, music and art workshops for five to 15-year-olds, culminating in a community day where those who took part showed off their new found skills and were presented with certificates.

Aspiring performers were able to tread the boards at Hoxton Hall, where the 'Hipnotic Summer Festival' gave them the chance to work with professionals from the world of dance, music and drama.

All five Young Hackney Centres held open sessions for young people looking for something to do; Forest Road's climbing wall proved popular, and The Edge, at Woodberry Down, held boxing sessions. A group of budding young business leaders took time out of their summer holidays to get advice from some of the City's top managers.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services and Education, said: "Young people are the borough's greatest resource.

"The Council's Young Hackney service and our many voluntary sector colleagues work hard to support them to recognise and make a reality of their talent and potential – and to have fun while doing so."

Summer nights

THE last days of summer were marked in style across Hackney as residents came together to share in festivities put on by Hackney Homes.

Residents from Colville, De Beauvoir, Nightingale and Shellgrove estates enjoyed entertainment from a DJ, face painter and balloon artist at a series of fun days at the end of August. The events were also a chance to speak to Council and Hackney Homes staff about services, as well as local sport and volunteering organisations.

Janet Cassidy, member of the Shellgrove Estate resident association, said: "Hackney Homes has done a wonderful job. Everyone's enjoying themselves and the food has been fantastic. Thanks to all the volunteers, the DJ and the Resident Participation Team. It's been a great success."

> "Hackney Homes has done a wonderful job. Everyone's enjoying themselves and the food has been fantastic"

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, added: "These events across the borough have allowed us to engage with residents, listen to what they have to say, and build stronger community relations. We have provided a fun opportunity for residents to get to know more about our services and also to meet their neighbours."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

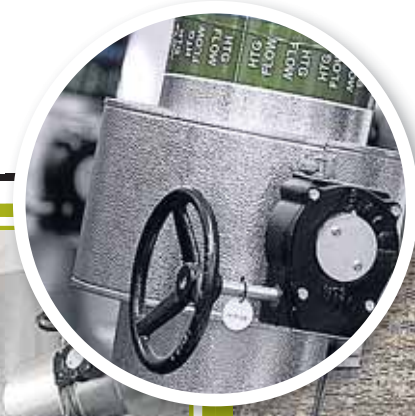

Q: I am thinking about buying an electric car to help reduce emissions and save money on the congestion charge. Will I still have to buy a residents' parking permit and where can I charge up the car in Hackney?

A: Residents and businesses in Hackney that have electric vehicles can park for free in controlled parking zone areas, but still need to apply for a parking permit. The permit is free if you apply online, or £10 in person or by post. Order one at: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking. If you join Source London you will also be able to use any of their 1,400 charging points across the capital. There are 15 charging points in Hackney alone; see them on a map at: www.hackney.gov.uk/electric-vehicles. The Council is also considering installing more charging points. Shoreditch heats up

A NEW heating system has been introduced to three Shoreditch Hackney Homes estates that will help save energy and reduce bills.

The Shoreditch Heat Network (SHN) is a combined heat and power system that is set to benefit over 400 residents on Cranston, Wenlock Barn and Fairbank estates.

More energy efficient than traditional methods, it burns natural gas to generate electricity and the heat generated by the process is used to warm homes and heat water.

Rather than bills, residents receive metering prepayment cards, giving them the freedom to manage and budget for their own heating; reducing the financial burden on households with energy consumption levels.

> "I like the idea of not worrying about receiving bills for my heating and I can just top up whenever is convenient"

A Cranston Estate resident uses the new card system to pay for her bills

Resident Joyce Archer said: "The new card system is so easy to use and payments will be a lot cheaper. I like the idea of not worrying about receiving bills for my heating and I can just top up whenever is convenient."

The network has been short listed in the Green Housing Performance category of magazine Inside Housing's Sustainable Housing Awards, which aim to put a spotlight on the best green social housing projects in the UK, and the organisations responsible for them.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, said: "This unique heating system will have a huge benefit to the everyday lives of our residents.

"In addition to reducing fuel bills and saving energy, the new heat and power system will also give individuals the ability to manage their heating throughout the year."

Growing Communities is taking part in both Urban Food Fortnight and Open House weekend on 22 September.

It's a chance to view urban market gardens in Clissold Park and Allens Gardens, where Growing Communities produces its 'zero-food miles' salad, and get expert tips on organic food growing.

At Clissold Park there will also be local organic food to try, made with on site ingredients, as well as fruit and veg from Growing Communities' box scheme and, Stoke Newington Farmers' Market.

Enjoy a free tour of the growing area at Allens Gardens on 22 September

> "Growing delicious local food in the heart of the city... is a key part of our aim to change the food system"

Visitors to Allens Gardens can enjoy tours of the growing area and will be able to look round the site's eco-classroom, with its composting toilet, rainwater harvesting, and insect-attracting flowering roof.

Grower Paul Bradbury said: "Growing delicious local food in the heart of the city, really close to where it will be consumed, is a key part of Growing Communities' aim to change the food system into one that is more sustainable."

The market gardens in Clissold Park will be open from 11am-5pm, and Allens Gardens will be open from 10am-5pm. Entrance to both sites is free.

News in brief

Tackle litter: clean up Hackney

RESIDENTS are being urged to join this year's Capital Clean-up and help tackle litter, rubbish and graffiti in Hackney's parks, streets, estates, residential areas and waterways.

As part of the campaign, Capital Clean-up is inviting community groups and businesses in the borough to apply for grants of up to £500 – or a litter picking clean-up kit – to bring volunteers together for rubbish clearing events to improve local environments.

Earlier this year, 1,560 volunteers took part in 77 events across the capital and collected over 1,000 sacks of litter and 55 tonnes of fly-tipping.

Capital Clean-up is part of the Mayor of London's programme to encourage communities and boroughs to take action to tackle litter, in partnership with McDonald's.

Competition

Win a pair of tickets to Molly Wobbly's Tit Factory at Hackney Empire

THE talk of last year's Edinburgh Festival Fringe is set to make its London premiere at Hackney Empire.
Eight West End stars tell a saucy, outrageous story of shopkeepers who decide to get a few things off their chests in a musical comedy. Meanwhile, Mammary Lane gets an unexpected makeover when a stranger arrives at the town of Little Happening.
With clever, funny lyrics and tuneful songs, this outrageously funny musical pokes fun at today's surgery-obsessed culture.
After last year's review success of four and five stars, this production features three brand new songs and stars the original Edinburgh cast.
Molly Wobbly's Tit Factory takes place at Hackney Empire, 291 Mare St, E8 1EJ, between 20 September and 5 October.

For a chance of winning a pair of tickets for the show, send a postcard to Molly Wobbly's competition, Hackney Today, 1st Floor, Maurice Bishop House, 17 Reading Lane, E8 1NN; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 13 September. All entries must include a name, address and telephone number. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

REVIEW

Future Cinema: Dirty Dancing

30 August-1 September, Hackney Downs

STANDING in line with 3,900 other women – and a handful of very lucky men – waiting to enter the Kellerman's holiday resort, excitement reached fever-pitch.
From 30 August to 1 September, while the evenings were still balmy, Hackney Downs was transformed into a female fantasy: a sugar-sweet holiday camp serving the finest cocktails with an illicit staff quarters just a few mambo steps away.
Dressed in our finest 60s outfits, complete with watermelons, Tiki flower garlands, beach balls and hula-hoops, we were greeted by the ever-polite Kellerman reps, before being whisked away by a minature train for an evening of salsa, ballroom and shag (the famous southern American dance, that is).
As would be expected by creators Future Cinema, no attention to detail was spared for this cinematic experience: from the delicious food and cocktails, to the hilarious dance classes and raucuos staff bar.
Of course the climax was the film showing itself: when Baby (Jennifer Grey) and Johnny (Patrick Swayze) attempted to do 'the lift' in that lake scene, squeals of delight could be heard across the park.

The Hackney Pirates offers a safe, fun, and creative after-school learning environment for nine to 12-year-olds

A PROJECT to boost school children's literacy skills through creative learning has been awarded a £10,000 grant.

The Hackney Pirates offers a safe and fun after-school learning environment for nine to 12-year-olds.

Children learn vital literacy and social skills in the 'Ship of Adventures' – a unique work space designed to look like a pirate ship. Currently based in Downham Road, The Hackney Pirates are set to move to a permanent home on Kingsland Road at the end of the year, thanks to a subsidised rent deal with the Council.

> "We believe young people progress fastest when given personalised attention from an adult who cares"

Set up in 2010 by ex-teacher Catriona Maclay, the project gives young people one-to-one support from local volunteers.

The grant is one of 10 awarded by Team London to fund local initiatives that demonstrate innovative ways of encouraging volunteering.

Olly Offord, volunteer coordinator for The Hackney Pirates, said: "We believe young people progress fastest when given personalised attention from an adult who cares, and we want to utilise the brilliant community of Hackney to ensure all local young people have access to this.

"This grant from Team London is incredibly important to us. It will mean that we can work on getting more volunteers aboard and can make an impact on even more Young Pirates to help them with their literacy and real world skills."

News in brief

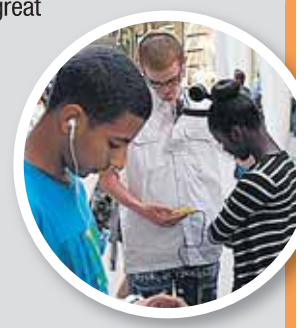

Hackney pupils test new app

TWO students from Hackney University Technical College took time out during their summer holidays to test a new app designed to inspire young people about engineering.

Emmanuella Manning and Jake Wilson (pictured) are studying digital technology at the Hoxton college and working towards a career in the digital industry. The duo were part of a group of students, aged 14 to 17, who were invited to test out a new app prior to its launch.

The ACE Trails app guides visitors around King's Cross and describes how engineers have helped to transform the area in a series of 15 videos.

Jane Calvert-Lee, project manager for the app, said: "Emmanuella and Jake were great to work with. They were very quick to get into using the app and offered a wonderfully professional analysis for such young users."

The free app is being launched by the Association for Consultancy and Engineering on 10 September.

Illegal school shut down

THE Council's enforcement team has won a legal battle against an illegal school operating in Stamford Hill.

Bnois Jerusalem Girls' School on Amhurst Road was operating over capacity and had spilled over into a mid-terrace house next door. Two of the three floors in this property only had planning permission for residential use; some rooms were too small to teach in; and the area for pupils to play at breaktime was very restricted.

Over the course of the enforcement operation complaints were made to the Council from residents concerned by a number of issues including poor facilities for a large number of pupils; increased traffic and its impact on pedestrian safety; high noise levels; and loss of privacy and housing. The school was fined £6,000 plus costs at Snaresbrook Crown Court on 9 August.

Love reading and writing? Become a Hackney Reading Activist and help others

MORE than 50 young people have signed up to a scheme to help promote literacy in the borough.

Hackney Reading Activists are volunteers, aged 11 to 19, who help create reading and writing hubs in their local libraries by setting up events to encourage other young people to participate.

Working alongside librarians, the Reading Activists will gain new skills and accreditation, as well as meeting writers, artists and other creative people along the way.

The national initiative already operates across 18 regions in the UK. By next year it is estimated there will be 6,000 young people running 60 reading hubs in libraries, schools and youth clubs nationwide.

Alice, 11, said: "I didn't expect the activities to be so much fun. I had a fantastic time and made some new friends."

The group has already put on films, organised author visits, posted reviews of study books on YouTube and are in the process of producing an online magazine.

Some have also attended a writers' retreat in York and taken part in a digital training workshop.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "It's great to see young people in Hackney championing reading and writing by creating their own groups to share the importance of good literacy with other young people."

Hackney is on the hunt for more Reading Activists. To sign up or find out more, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/libraries-whats-on

Main and inset: Claudia Teixeira-Ferreira, from Clapton Girls' Academy, has got through to the last stage of the FAD Junior Awards

Fashion forward

A HACKNEY schoolgirl has made it through to the finals of a prestigious competition that will see her designs showcased during London Fashion Week.

Claudia Teixeira-Ferreira, from Clapton Girls' Academy, is one of just 20 young people from across the capital to get to the last stage of the Fashion Awareness Direct (FAD) Junior Awards.

She was one of 100 young people, aged 16 to 19, from 19 inner-city boroughs who took part in a series of workshops to gain an insight into the fashion industry and develop the practical skills to design and create their own garments.

> "It's been a really fun and exciting opportunity to be part of FAD's Junior Awards"

The 20 finalists were then selected by an industry panel to complete an intensive summer school programme and produce clothes inspired by their urban surroundings.

Their designs will be seen on the catwalk on 17 September in front of an audience of friends, family and top industry names as a part of London Fashion Week. The winner will secure a top design placement with project sponsors George at Asda.

Claudia said: "It's been a really fun and exciting opportunity to be part of FAD's Junior Awards and to be able to show my work at London Fashion Week is just amazing."

Louise Ibak, from George, added: "Overall there has been a lot of talent this year and given the age range of some of the students taking part, some of the final garments have been mind blowing."

The charity FAD has been running its Fashion Futures programme for nine years. It aims to nurture young talent, working with industry partners to bring practical skills, careers advice and life changing opportunities to those from disadvantaged backgrounds.

To date FAD has worked with more than 8,000 young people across the UK. As a result of taking part in the Junior Awards, past finalists have gone on to study at institutions such as London College of Fashion and Chelsea School of Art and Design.

Money secured for arts project

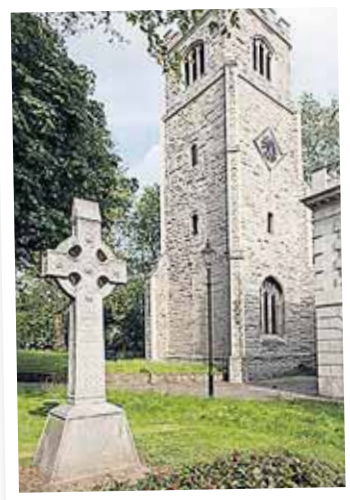

A HERITAGE and arts project for young people in Hackney has won nearly £19,000 in lottery funding.

Newington Dance Space secured the money for a 16-week programme of professional development workshops that will culminate in a public performance at St Augustine's Tower in the Narrow Way (pictured).

The project, for 12 residents aged 19 to 25, is an opportunity to gain experience, skills, a qualification, and references which could help secure work or further education in the heritage or arts fields.

It will focus on devising a performance and researching the site's history through heritage workshops and talks.

Frankie Walker, from Newington Dance Space, said: "It's great to know that Saint Augustine's Tower will be accessible to our young people."

As well as receiving £18,300 from the Heritage Lottery Fund, the project is supported by the Hackney Historic Buildings Trust and the Council's Hackney Archives service.

'St Augustine's Clock Tower: Turning Back Time', runs from 11 September until 11 December. For more info, call: 07507 797 173; or e-mail: frankie@newingtondancespace.com

£10k grant for youth mentoring

A MENTORING scheme pairing Hackney young people leaving care with City high flyers has been awarded a £10,000 Team London grant.

TimeBank's City Opportunities Project aims to encourage under-represented groups from Hackney to access jobs in the City. It also seeks to bridge the gap between the capital's financial district and those who live in neighbouring communities.

The project will match City professionals with young Londoners who have been in care and are aged 16 to 24, as part of a one-to-one mentoring programme.

The volunteers will help young people build their confidence, enhance their skills and increase their access to education and employment opportunities.

TimeBank will provide tailored mentoring support, with the pairs meeting over a six month period. The charity is calling on City employees from all sectors to get involved.

Helen Walker, Chief Executive of TimeBank, said: "I'm delighted that funding from Team London will enable us to support this vulnerable group of young Londoners."

The grant is one of 10 being awarded by Team London to fund local initiatives which demonstrate innovative ways of encouraging volunteering.

Team London is the Greater London Authority's volunteering programme for London.

Parents are encouraged to sign up to the NHS's Smart Restart campaign

Life-changing choices

PARENTS are being urged to sign up to a nationwide campaign that encourages families to work together to lead healthier lifestyles.

The NHS initiative Change4Life has launched a back to school drive to get people to try a six week programme which focuses on eating well and doing more exercise.

Families pledge to make a change in just one area of their daily lives, starting from the beginning of term. This includes walking or cycling to school; doing 60 minutes of physical activity a day; enticing children away from the computer for 30 minutes a day; swapping sweets and other treats for healthier alternatives; and preparing healthier packed lunches.

Studies have found that eating well and exercising can help boost children's energy levels and concentration at school.

Parents should sign up to the Smart Restart programme by 15 September. They will then be able to download a free app and receive texts and e-mails with loads of tips and tools to help the whole family make one small change become a healthy habit. They will also receive details of offers, competitions and virtual rewards for children.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "We know it's important to keep our children healthy and active but, sometimes we can fall into bad habits that we need a little help to break. Change4Life can do just that. By signing up to make one small change you will get the support that could help make a big difference to your families' future."

News in brief

Social care service changes

RESIDENTS are being asked to have their say on changes that will affect how people pay for social care services. The proposed Government changes are likely to have a significant impact on how councils like Hackney deliver care locally.

The key differences are that from April 2015, people would have the option to delay paying their care home fees through a deferred payment scheme. Those living in a care home with assets of less than £118,000, including their own home, could get some of their care paid for by the Council from April 2016.

A £72,000 limit on how much people pay for their care would be set from April 2016. The Council would be responsible for any extra costs after that. Some people would pay less than the cap however, including under 18s and those who need care before retirement age.

The Council is holding an event to consult on the proposals. 'Caring For Our Future' takes place on 26 September at the Ann Tayler Centre, Triangle Road, E8. Those unable to attend can still take part in the consultation by visiting: www.hackney.gov.uk/care-reform until 25 October. For more info, call: 020 8356 6262; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk

Homerton hospital embraces the art of the matter

A SERIES of postcards handmade by patients recovering from traumatic brain injuries at Homerton hospital are set to go on display at Hackney Museum this month.

Over 2,500 old postcards were donated by hospital staff to the Regional Neurological Rehabilitation Unit (RNRU) at Homerton and were then customised by patients using colouring in and collage. The aim of the project was to encourage patients to get in touch with their creative sides.

It proved so popular that patients often chose to work on the postcards at their bedsides, in the evenings, and at weekends.

Art curator Shaun Caton said: "This is a wonderful project that is all about sharing a postcard with someone else and making a small art work out of it.

"The hospital staff have been fantastic in supplying us with so many cards to work with; patients have added their magic touches to produce some highly original and stunning art works.

"We are delighted to be putting on this exhibition which empowers patients by offering them creative self-expression through the many mediums of art."

The free exhibition, called 'Preposterous Postcards' will run from 10 September until 16 November. For more info and opening hours, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/museum

Conservation Areas Advisory Committees

Are you interested in planning and conservation issues?

Do you care about the future of your local area?

If so, you may wish to join one of Hackney's six Conservation Area Advisory Committees, which advise the Council on planning issues affecting the borough's 29 conservation areas.

The six groups cover Shoreditch, Kingsland, Dalston, Stoke Newington, Clapton and Central & South Hackney.

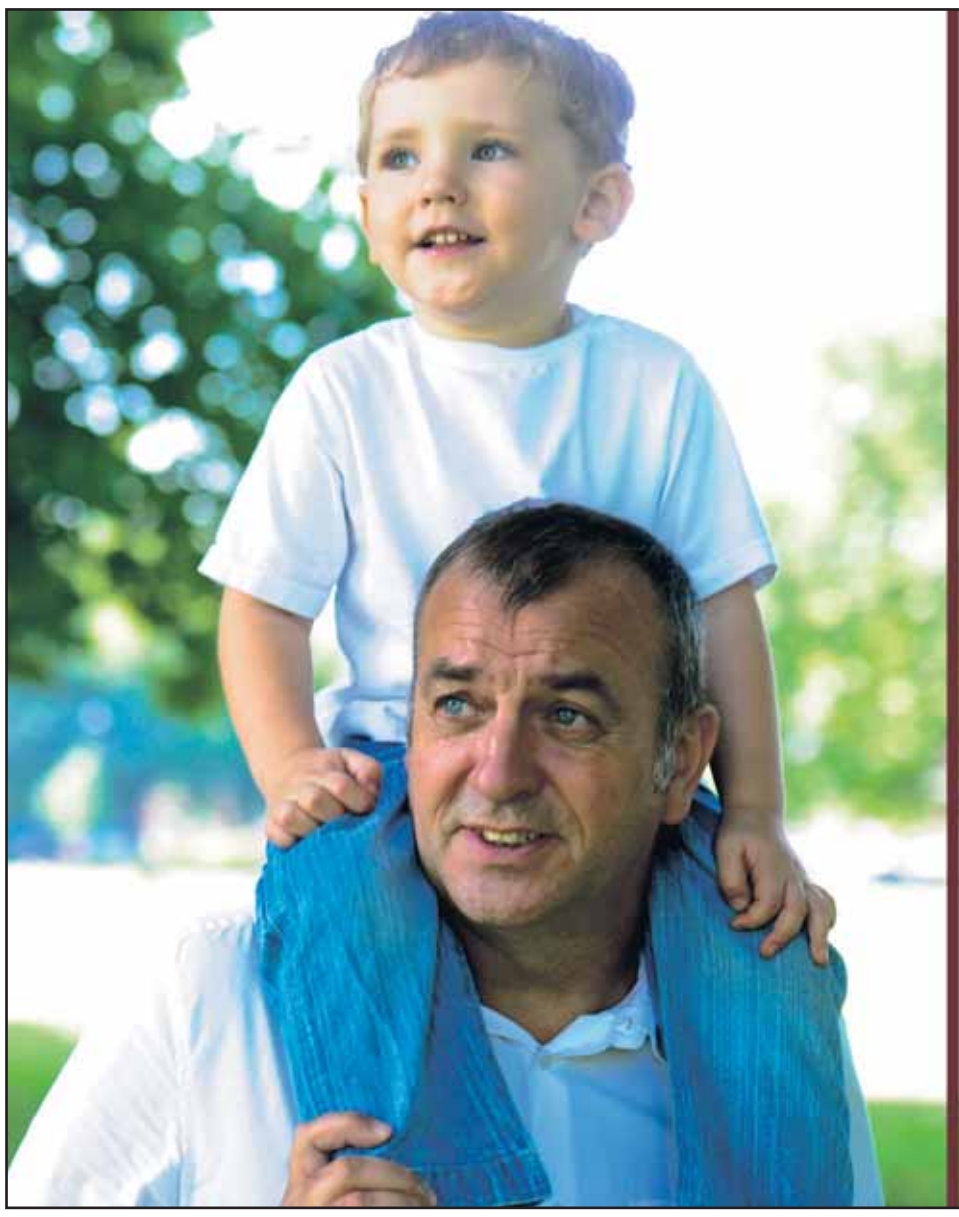

As well as advising on planning matters, the groups also help identify buildings that should be considered for listing and bring breaches of planning control to the Council's attention.

Members are not expected to have a special knowledge of planning or conservation issues but a general interest and a basic understanding would be useful. You should be able to attend regular monthly meetings and occasional meetings at other times. All positions are offered on a voluntary basis.

If you would like further information, or wish to join, please contact Matt Payne, Conservation, Urban Design & Sustainability Team telephone: 020 8356 8106 or email: matt.payne@hackney.gov.uk

Charity begins at school

By Sally England

Clockwise from above: A view of the school in 1807; extract from an OS map, 1870; 4 Kingsland Road today; a watercolour from 1839 showing the central statue

TODAY we take for granted the state provision of education for all, but until the Elementary Education Act of 1870 schools were either private fee-paying institutions, or charitable establishments funded by local subscription.

A charity school first opened in Shoreditch in 1705. It was a room in Pitfield Street with places for 50 boys. Pupils were drawn from the four areas, or 'liberties', that Shoreditch was divided into for tax purposes – Moorfields, Holywell, Church End and Hoxton – with the number of boys from each based on the proportion of funds the liberty contributed.

In 1709, a house was rented in Pitfield Street for 11 years to enable the school to take 40 girls, a number which gradually grew to 50 by 1715. Religious education was paramount, with no great academic aspirations for the children; the boys were expected to take up apprenticeships, the girls to go into domestic service. Each child received new clothes every March.

By the time the lease on the house was due to expire, it was clear that a purpose-built school was required, and so a site at the southern end of Kingsland Road was acquired. An indenture dated 26 February 1721 stated Shoreditch churchwardens had leased a building known as the Smith's House to the trustees of the school for 500 years 'with liberty to take down any part, and build in the place thereof a Charity School' for the annual rent of £18.

John Stow's 'Survey of London', published in 1603, notes that: "From Holy well in the high streete, is a continuall building of tenementes to Sewers ditch, hauing one small side of a fielde, already made a Garden plotte. Ouer against the north corner of this field, between it and the Church of Saint Leonarde in Shoreditch, sometime stood a Crosse, now a Smithes Forge, diuiding three wayes: forth right the high way is builded vpon eyther side, more then a good flight shoote, towardes Kinges land, Newington, Totanham, &c."

However, it is possible that the old cross itself was known as 'the Smith' as a document of 1588 refers to local groups meeting to 'make good cheer together, and contribute their monies towards the maintenance and repairing the Smith…', whilst a deed of 1586 refers to 'all that messuage or tenement commonly called the Smith's house'.

Perhaps Stow was mistaken and there never was a forge, but instead an ancient stone marking a road junction called – for reasons long forgotten – 'the Smith', which eventually gave its name to the building close to, or on the same site.

Early in the nineteenth century, the Commissioners of Shoreditch Pavement decided to widen the south end of Kingsland Road and in the process acquired part of the site where the charity schools stood.

The schoolhouse was knocked down and the Trustees were awarded £800 as compensation for that and for loss of ground. An additional £943 was raised by residents and collected through St Leonard's church, to pay for building a new schoolhouse and shop on the corner at 2 Kingsland Road which was leased to apothecary John Weston for 61 years.

As the education acts of the nineteenth century pushed for compulsory elementary education, more schools opened in Shoreditch and the importance of the old parochial charity schools gradually waned, closing in the 1880s. Much of the building at 4 Kingsland Road still remains today, including plaques dating to the founding of the girls' school and the rebuilding of 1802. However the plaque commemorating the foundation of the boys' school has gone, and the central statue shown in early illustrations has disappeared, its niche converted into a window.

Today the building is a bookmakers, and where Mr Weston's apothecary once stood, there is now a kebab shop.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years.

The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map opposite.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

IN this edition, Shoreditch Trust presents a recipe from its healthy eating programme which aims to help residents produce healthy, tasty and seasonal food throughout the year.
Working as a good alternative to cheesecakes with a biscuit base, this method offers a healthy spin on a tasty treat.
Chef Edouard Guidon said: ''Oats are a great way to avoid hydrogenated fat usually found in packet biscuits. Swapping cream for a lovely low-fat yogurt reduces the level of saturated fat content without taking away the creamy taste. Soft berries are in season right now, but blended tinned mangoes or peaches also make a great topping.''

Mini date and oat cheesecakes

Makes 12 small cheesecakes

Preparation time
20 mins

Cooling time
2 hours

Ingredients

For the base
- 8 dates (pitted)
- 2 cups of small rolled oats
- Zest of 1 orange
- 2 tablespoons juice from the orange (removing the pips).

For the filling
- 200g thick Greek or Turkish yoghurt
- 400g full fat cream cheese
- 1 tablespoon icing sugar
- 1 teaspoon orange zest
- 1 teaspoon vanilla essence.

For the topping
- 400g raspberries (blueberries and strawberries work well too)
- 1-2 tablespoons icing sugar to sweeten
- Juice of 1 orange
- 1 teaspoon orange zest.

Method

- First, prepare the base: blend the dates with enough water to form a thick paste. Add the oats and the orange zest and combine to make a thick, firm mixture
- Line a tin or a muffin tray with greaseproof paper and spoon in the mixture to form a smooth, flat base. Refrigerate while you turn your attention to the rest of the recipe
- Next, make the topping: in a saucepan, add the orange juice, icing sugar, orange zest and half the berries. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer for five minutes or until the berries begin to break up. Set aside to cool
- Finally, make the filling: fold the cream cheese, sugar, orange zest and vanilla essence into the yoghurt. Refrigerate until ready to use
- Now that all the components are ready, it's time to assemble them into the final product. Top the base with a layer of the filling and smooth the surface using a spatula
- Pour the berry mix on top of the cheesecake using a spoon and decorate with the fresh berries. Refrigerate.

Have your say on cashless payments on London buses

TRANSPORT for London (TfL) is proposing to no longer accept cash payments on buses from next year.

Following the combined introduction of Oyster cards in 2003, and contactless payment cards last year, cash payments are expected to fall from a 20 per cent average 10 years ago, to less than one per cent this year.

TfL believe that 'going cashless' will continue to reduce boarding times and delays, providing an improved service for passengers as well as saving £24million by 2020.

Should this proposal go ahead it will affect all buses in London, including Hackney which has more than 30 bus routes running through it, as well as night buses.

For more info and to have your say on these proposals, visit: tfl.gov.uk/cashless to complete an online survey. The consultation runs until 11 October.
